Kingmaker Eaton Cold War Moses?

* * *

NEW YORK (UPI)—The notion that Cyrus Eaton could be the Moses who will lead North America out of the wilderness of the cold war is incubating slowly in the United States.

The Cleveland millionaire never can occupy the White House because of his Canadian birth. But he had an important part in making Franklin Delano Roosevelt president and helped to wreck the presidential ambitions of Wendell Willkie and Robert Taft—two men on whom he had inflicted crushing defeats in business warfare.

FATEFUL GAME

Nobody can tell how Eaton will play his cards behind the scenes at the Democratic convention next year. But his crusading for a settlement with the Reds and his bitter feud with Secretary of State Dulles and President Eisenhower certainly imply Eaton intends to deal himself a hand in the fateful game.

Some believe Eaton is a political amateur and a naive ideological maverick. The facts are, John Barden wrote last week in the political weekly The Nation, that Eaton has been a manipulator in American politics for a quarter of a century and never has suffered a real defeat. In foreign economic affairs, Eaton has engaged in successful and complicated negotiations with many governments for a generation.

SCIENTISTS' SUPPORT

Eaton has carved himself a place in the vital fields of education and scientific progress, sponsoring conferences that have won him the support of the scientists to a degree politicians haven't yet realized.

Eaton's program is diametrically opposed to that of the Eisenhower administration that if his ideas prevail in any great measure in next year's election, there could be the biggest political and economic changes in the U.S. since the New Deal.

Eaton's foreign program seems all the more startling.

He wants to stop what he calls Dulles' "gambling with the destiny of the world without restraint from any quarter." He wants the President to visit Russia and wants Nikita Khrushchev invited to the U.S.; he wants to recognize Red China and admit her to the UN.

To Dulles' argument that recognizing Red China would dismay America's friends in Asia, Eaton retorts—"Who are these friends? Well, the biggest one is India. India recognized China long ago. . . . Pakistan, Ceylon, Burma and Indonesia have recognized China. Japan is the only major nation in the Far East which hasn't, and it has been restrained from doing so only by pressure from the United States."

Eaton would accept Khrushchev's offer of a friendship treaty and stop stockpiling nuclear weapons. He would, as he puts it, "quit meddling in the affairs of other nations" and get all the scientists of the world working together for progress and peace.

Eaton's domestic program indicates he still has a lot of the FDR influence in his makeup. He calls right-to-work laws "phony;" he favors larger and more powerful banks to guarantee financial stability.

He thinks free enterprise capitalism must be more dynamic and that politicians must look to the industrialist, the labor chief, the preacher, the scholar and the farmer for this dynamic leadership.

As Barden wrote—"Eaton is taking his case to the productive people of the world."

Castro Starts Reforms

BAYAMO, Cuba (AP)—Fidel Castro lost no time Monday in getting down to work on his program for agrarian reform. He calls it "the cardinal longing and first necessity for our people."

The revolutionary leader flew to the village of Guayabar de Nagua, where he once led his bearded soldiers, and conferred with engineers and other experts on the program.

Sugar cane and rice farms in the Rio del Cauto area are expected to be the site of the pilot program in Oriente province.

KAMLOOPS TROUT

British Columbia's prized Kamloops trout may reach 15 to 20 pounds in streams of that province.

The land reform law was decreed by the rebels last November even before their revolution was triumphant. At the start, it envisions 67-acre grants of government land to 22,500 families.

Agronomist Hector Goiricelaya said the government will move later to take over government land "occupied" by private landlords during the last 30 years.
